"Gardar Eide Einarsson: Flagwaste" at Team Gallery

Originally shown in the leadup to the 2016 US presidential election, Gardar Eide Einarsson's Flagwaste is made up of discarded fabrics from factories that make US flags, presented as a crumpled sculpture of fabric dumped on the floor. Einarsson has restaged the work two years later—with Donald Trump now as president—scattering the tattered scraps across the gallery, rather than mounding them all together, for a more mournful effect.

Location: Team Gallery, 83 Grand Street

Price: Free

Time: Tuesday–Saturday, 10 a.m.–6 p.m.
